more than 2000 ft. above sea level. The valley floor is a broad, flat plain, about 10 miles wide, bounded by high mountains on all sides. The climate is very hot and dry, with temperatures ranging from 80° to 100° F. in summer, and from 50° to 70° F. in winter. The soil is very poor, consisting mainly of sand and gravel, with some patches of loamy soil. The vegetation is sparse, with scattered trees and shrubs, and a dense growth of grasses and other low-growing plants. The water supply is limited, coming from several small streams and springs, and from a few wells. The economy of the valley is based on agriculture, with cotton, corn, and beans being the main crops. There is also some animal husbandry, with cattle, sheep, and goats. The people are mostly of African descent, with some mixed ancestry. They speak a language called "Kikuyu", which is similar to Swahili. The valley is located in the central part of Kenya, about 100 miles south of Nairobi. It is a popular tourist destination, with many visitors coming to see the unique landscape and the local culture. The valley is also known for its coffee production, with several coffee plantations located here.

of trumpet corralled with spruce and fir. This country has a high upper limit before it meets with snow. The upper part of the valley bottom is a very dry, arid, rocky, gravelly surface with little soil other than from washes. It has a thin layer of open, short, brittle grasses, here and there. Rocks of various materials form the slopes of the valley, some with spruce, others with pine, some with spruce and yellow pine, some with many species of shrubs, some with
